

ACES Student Government Association Shapes Leaders for Tomorrow

ACES Student Government Association (SGA) shapes young leaders for tomorrow as students learn skills in working together to give back to their school and to their community. During an exciting campaign election, ACES students got the opportunity to hear speeches from their candidates before voting on their favorite candidates. Students learned the skills of teamwork, cooperation, communication and respect for others ideas as they competed against each other. Students also experienced the anguish and excitement of waiting in line to enter a real voting booth while gaining the first-hand experience of making difficult choices that can affect a student's future. After the election, four officers were selected to lead the Student Government Association. The newly elected 2009-2010 Student Government Association officials include Jake Norman as president, Adam Brown as vice-president, Dean Nadler and Max Youtie as the secretary and treasurer. They'll lead ACES Middle School students in numerous school and community activities and fundraisers that will demonstrate their dedication and commitment to leadership at ACES. The SGA also has plans to organize and initiate ACES first reunion where former graduates will be invited back to school for a special Reunion Lunch with Middle School Students.
